How Can Moral Be Independent From Religion?

Moral is impossible from religion though its reduced type can be independent from confessional form.

True religion in objective plan is a belief in universe as reasonable and spiritual one but not some blind stochastic force. In its inner aspect religion is the art of soul development. The soul is the essence of man so religion is the art of human creature development.

Connected with the full belief or the sacred trust the highest human feelings in their core are religious or sacral feelings. Therefore they are moral feelings too because they mean ontological roots of a man in the universe, his harmony with reality as a whole.
